

Summer is over and over the last few weeks things have gotten a lot busier in NoHo, NYU students are roaming the streets and more people are shopping and eating. We're thrilled to see everyone back in the neighborhood.

So whether it's your first time in NoHo, first time in a long time, or first time this week, welcome back, and enjoy this very special Welcome Back Edition of the NoHo Voice.

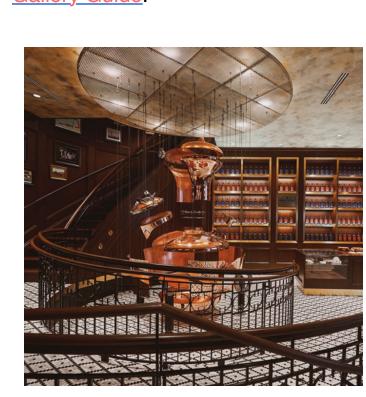

The NoHo Lunch Guide

Let's be honest, one of life's simple joys is treating yourself with a lunch out. If you've been out of the neighborhood for awhile, you might be wondering where to grab lunch. While the lunch scene has changed during COVID, we've got some new favorites to join classic spots. Read the NoHo Lunch Guide here.

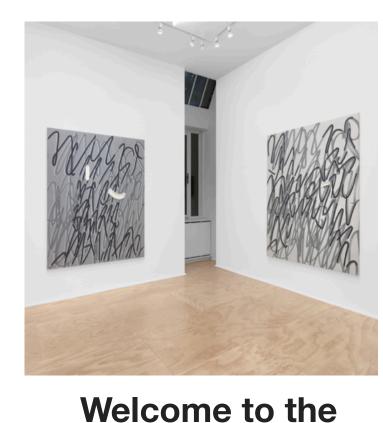

The NoHo Gallery Guide

As summer draws to a close, our neighborhood's galleries begin to fill up with more and more exciting shows for the fall season. There's lots of new, exciting art shows in the neighborhood to see and enjoy! Click here to check out the NoHo Gallery Guide.

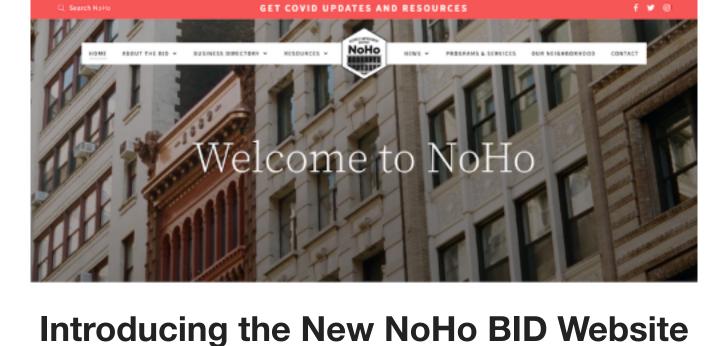

The Coffee Shop & Cafe Guide

There's no shortage of spots to refuel, start your day, or perk up your afternoon in NoHo! Whether it matcha, coffee, or chagaccinos, our neighborhood cafes and coffee shops have got you covered! The NoHo Coffee Shop & Cafe Guide has all your coffee needs covered.

Neighborhood, Great Jones Distillery

Manhattan's first distillery since Prohibition has finally arrived in NoHo. Great Jones Distillery is located in an elegant space on Broadway, and with different concepts spread across four floors, there's lots to see and explore. Learn more here.

COVID's challenged our community over the last year and a half. As our neighborhood continues to emerge and revive, we're excited to have a brand new look to help our neighborhood grow into the future and achieve our mission of supporting the businesses, property owners, residents, and artists that make NoHo a truly special community to be in.

NoHo.NYC features an all-new business resource hub, added content sections, more ways to discover NoHo, and improved SEO & reliability.

Visit NoHo.NYC

NoHo Image of the Month

How to Keep the Workplace Safe

Whether you haven't been back to the office since March 2020, are easing into coming in more regularly, or are coming back full time, it's important to make sure staff are safe and feel comfortable in the office. Below we've included a few helpful resources + guides to keep your workforce safe.

CO. by US Chamber of Commerce Welcome Back to Work Guide

CDC's Office Reopening Checklist

New York State's Business Reopening Guidance Explained

A huge part of keeping your workplace safe includes installing procedures to prevent the spread of highly communicable diseases. This is exactly what the NYC HERO Act aims to do. This new program from New York State is no in effect, and you must implement a safety plan of some kind. While there is still a lot of questions around this guidance, these plans are designed to help keep staff safe. Learn more about the NYC HERO Act here.

Key to NYC - What You Need to Know

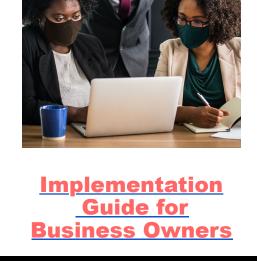

Key to NYC is now fully in effect and is actively being enforced by NYC government. This program requires vaccination to participate in certain indoor activities, including dining, nightlife, fitness, entertainment, and more.

Your staff must be vaccinated under these rules, and there are no exceptions. If staff cannot be vaccinated, for any reason, they can only work in very limited circumstances, and there's testing or masking alternative.

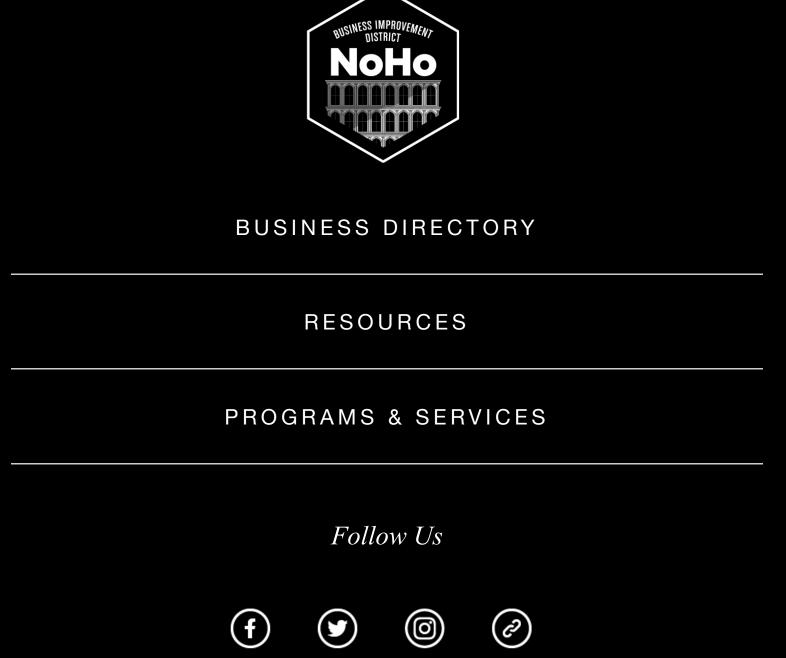

We know there's a lot of questions you might have. Check our COVID-19

Updates Page to learn more. We will regularly update this page with more information as it becomes available.

No longer want to receive these emails? Unsubscribe. NOHO 636 Broadway Suite 1208 New York, NY 10012